

From dragonflies to butterflies, there are different insects that live in a river's marsh. These insects depend on many plants, and the plants need the river to live and grow.