

Water from the ocean flows into the St. Johns River. The place where the ocean tide meets the river is called an estuary, where dolphins play and look for food.